I turned my attention back to the falling object and was surprised to see that it was made up of angular panels and was in fact a symmetrical object and that it had now altered its trajectory and was curving smoothly around and moving along the same path as the Argosy, which had passed directly below it. It progressed horizontally for perhaps a couple of hundred yards - until it was directly to the north of my position and only a few hundred yards away. It stopped in mid-air - rotating slowly with the afternoon sun glinting off its shiny metallic panels - like a mirror ball - but with far fewer sides.

I was quite perplexed by this and struggled for some explanation of what I was seeing. Having been stationary for some 15 or 20 seconds, and still facing towards the Argosy which it appeared to be tracking, it suddenly accelerated rapidly away to the North still rotating slowly and climbing on a smooth shallow trajectory.

It was only now that I realized that I had witnessed the behavior of a U.F.O., in broad daylight over West Boston, of all places. I rushed inside and grabbed a pair of Binoculars, rushed back outside and climbed up the brick wall on to the roof of the garage. I was gone no more than 1 minute. I then located it by its flashes - Hovering some 8 miles to the NEAST.
